HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily disease the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach this and yet there are hundreds who ridicule the idea, and continue in the course which almost inevitably brings them prematurely to the grave. Being as the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the laws of nature, it must be apparent to all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food are constantly complaining of having a heavy phnally in the end. The stomach becomes disordered and refuses to act: the liver fails to perform its functions, dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and until the suffering individuals persist in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines are recommended to all such. They bring sure and certain relief wherever they are used as directed, and all that is necessary to establish their reputation with every sitling man or woman in the lands a fair and impartial trial of them. Let those who are skeptical on this point, and who have permitted interested persons to prejudice them against these new celebrated remedies for consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the seat of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. To cleanse and invigorate the stomach and to stimulate the liver to healthy action, use

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.—The daily increasing demand for these pills is the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently. Invalids who may not find it convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP AND SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be said by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, "How do Dr. Schenck's medicines effect their wonderful cures of consumption?"

The answer is a simple one. They begin their work of restoration by bringing the stomach, liver and bowels into an active healthy condition. It is feed that cures this formidable disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and removing the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of those organs, and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body, and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named prevent the proper digestion of food, and, as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PALMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC, when taken regularly, mingle with the food, and the digestive organs, make good and rich blood, and as a natural consequence, give flesh and strength to the patient. Let the faculty say what it may, this is the only true cure for consumption. Experience has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, and thousands are to-day alive and well who a few years since were regarded as hopeless cases, but who were induced to try Dr. SCHENCK'S remedies, and were restored to permanent health by their use.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and enervate—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach and bowels of all substances which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They create an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and, as a consequence, they invigorate and strengthen the entire system and more especially those parts which are diseased. What cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make a patient feel hungry, if the deceased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this send liton so long as the liver is burdened with diseased bile, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The remedies ordinarily prescribed do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

There is, after all, nothing like facts which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. Schenck relies. Nearly all who have taken his medicines in accordance with his directions have not only been cured of consumption, but, from the fact that these medicines act with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, patients thus cured speedily gain flesh—thereby laying them on an impervious foundation for a solid, substantial structure. Restoring these organs to healthy they create an appetite. The food is properly assimilated—the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr. SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his office, No. 15 North Sixth St., corner of Commerce, Phila., every Saturday, from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is $5.

THE BABY'S DRAWER.

BY MRS. L. BUTTS.

There's a little drawer in my chamber
Guarded with tenderest care,
Where the dirty clothes are lying,
That my darling shall never wear.
And there, while the hours are waning,
Till the house is all at rest,
I sit and I fancy a baby
Close to my aching breast.

My darling's pretty, white garment!
I wrought, sitting apart,
While his mystic life was throbbing
Under my beating heart.
And often my happy dreamings
Breaks in a little song
Like the summer birds at brooding
When the days are warm and long.

I finished the dainty wardrobe,
And the drawer was almost full
With robes of the finest muslin,
And robes of the whitest wool.

I folded them all together,
With a rose for every pair,
Smiling, and saying, "Gem fragrant,
Fit for my prince to wear."

Ah! the radiant summer morning,
So full of a mother's joy;
"Thank God, he is fair and perfect,
My beautiful, new born boy."

Let him wear the pretty white garments
I wrought while sitting apart
Lay him, so sweet and so helpless,
Here, close to my throbbing heart.

Many and many an evening
I sat, since my baby came,
Saying, "What do the angels call him?"
For he died without a name;
Till the house is all at rest,
And the hours are waning,
And fancy a baby nestling
Close to my aching breast.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

PATIENT IN SUFFERING.

Some weeks ago one of the men working in our office told us of a little girl who the day before had fallen down stairs and broken her hip. Said he:

"It is to bad, for she was such a playful little romp, and her mother is too poor to care for her as she should be cared for."

So we went out with him one night after the day's work was done. Down a narrow street, turning here and there—into a cross street swarming with noisy children, dogs, cats and jostling humanity. Then into a little alley between two brick houses—thro' and into a little back yard or area lined by house walls—up the back stairs one two, three flights—into a little half furnished room.

Only one room, not twenty feet square. Two windows looking out into, and down upon the contracted area or yard. Ceilings low, for it costs to build high in the city as in town.—Not a bit of carpet on the floor—one little ten cent picture (a little girl playing with a kitten) on the wall—a little, old, cracked stove in a corner, with a stow pan thereon, in which a bone was being boiled. A rude bedstead stood in the opposite corner, three old chairs and a three-legged table standing against the wall, marked the comforts of this home. By the table, working by the light of a villainous-looking kerosene lamp, sat a middle aged woman, making blue overalls, while on the bed lay the little girl we came to see.

"And here is where you live?"

"Yes, sir—we try to live here."

"How is the little one to-night?"

"Just about so, sir. She suffers a good deal."

"She bothers you about working, does she not?"

"Yes sir, but I don't mind that."

"How many hours a day do you work?"

"I don't know, sir. I am up soon as it is light, and I work all day till everything is still on the streets; about midnight, I think, sir."

"What rent do you pay for this room?"

"Two dollars a week, sir."

"How much do you earn?"

"Sometimes sixty cents a day. But since Annie has been sick I can't earn more than fifty and some days not that."

"You can't lay up much then?"

"No, sir. It is hard work to get along. When Annie is well she makes some days ten cents selling papers, and if it is too rainy to sell papers she sweeps the crossings.

"How much does she make rainy days?"

"Some days nothing. Some days a few pennies. Once a man gave her a dollar, and I got her a new dress with it, and some shoes at a second-hand store. Once a lady gave her a half a dollar, but these don't always happen very often."

"Have you a husband?"

"Yes, sir—but—but—but—sir, he only comes here to sleep, and sometimes does not come at all. Sometimes he is here to supper and breakfast—sometimes he comes here when he is sick."

"Don't he help support you?"

"Not now, sir. He used to but he don't now, sir. He takes what money Annie makes, and goes off with it when I can't get hold of it and take out part of it, and then he scolds and swears at me."

"What does he do for a living?"

"Nothing, sir. He goes around; I don't know where. He is off with somebody, and drinks a good deal, sir. Sometimes he don't come home for a week."

"Do you love him?"

"Yes, sir—I did love him once, but it seems a long while ago, sir—when we lived in Harlem, and began to keep house, and when Annie was born. But he is not what he was then, sir. Then he was good, and never struck me, sir."

"He does not strike you now, does he?"

"Sometimes, sir, but not often. Only when he is in liquor. Two weeks ago he struck me with a chair because I did not have anything for him to eat, and I was lame a good while so I could not lift Annie, but it's most well now."

And she showed us a long, greenish looking bruise on her left shoulder, yet painful to the touch.

"Dont he help take care of Annie?"

"No sir." He scolded when she fell down stairs, and said she was careless. And that is all he does."

"Has he been home to-night?"

"No sir, not yet. He may come any minute."

"Let us see about the little one.—How old is she?"

"Eight years last July, sir."

Then we sat upon the edge of the ricketty bed and looked at the little girl. A pale feverish, little bundle of nervousness and aching pains. She lay in bed, a bundle of old rags under her head—the jet black hair in contrast with her pale face. An old shawl was thrown over her as she lay there helpless, her eyes looking at us as we have seen lambs look when waiting the knife of the butcher. We felt her wrist—it was hot, and the pulse was unsteady. Her brow was hot from nervous fever. A course undergarment revealed the half-starved anatomy before us, as she seemed to say—"Please, sir, I can't help being poor, for my father don't love me!"

We looked into her eyes till the tears came to more than one there—till the lashes over hers closed, and she turned her little head to the wall, while the tears trickled down her face.

"Annie! Look here, little one. Annie!"

Slowly she turned—

"Please, sir, I didn't mean to cry, but your hand felt so good on my head, and I was thinking if papa would only do so, it wouldn't hurt me so much to be sick, and to see poor mamma working all the time so hard."

And the tears rolled one after another down more than one cheek in that little room—that mockery of "home!"

"What do you want dear? Tell us what to get for you?"

"I want to be well, so I can help my mother!"

Was ever answer so eloquent? Who says the children of the poor are not near to God? How else could such Christ-like sympathy find its way from heart to lips even of little patient sufferers. And God made that reply the bridge over which this little one's father, and other sad ones' fathers can walk to return from the belt of desolate dissipation to the noble love of honest, earnest manhood.

"I want to be well, so I can help my mother!"

By the power given us under the golden shadow under which we write we will burn the sentence in letters of fire around the rim of the glass that father sends to his lips so often, and open his eyes, never to be closed, to the tearwet prayer of the child—

"I want to be well, so I can help my mother!"

"Well, dear, pretty soon you shall be well. And your mother is already helped. Your love helps her. Now tell what you want beside."

"Shall I tell you just what I want?"

"Yes, just what you want."

"I want some lemonade, for it will taste so good! Can I have some?"

"Why, God love you, little one—you shall have all you want—enough to swim in."

"When?"

"When? Right away—soon as we can get it?"

"And may I have an orange, too, sir?"

"Yes—a dozen of them."

* * * * * *

She drank the lemonade. She sucked an orange—not a little, dry one, but a great, big, luscious one, and after we had bathed her face, a little, she put her lips to ours—put her arms about our neck, and whispered—

"I do thank you, sir!"

We have heard the wildest, grandest thunder of Heaven, while sitting out in the storm to enjoy the terrific grandeur of the burst, the rumble and the flash which seemed to dance its zig-zag waltz on our very eye-lids—we have heard the thunders of brass and steel-mouthed artillery, have heard the death-shrieks of those quickly called to the final account, but that simple whispered "I thank you, sir," from the lips of the father-neglected little sufferer rises high above the storm, the thunder, the cannon, the shriek, and is heard even to our heart as we write this simple chapter of fact without effort or attempt to polish, adorn or beautify.

It cost but little to make her happy. A few kind words. A little money saved from foolish extravagance that we might do good therewith when came the chance and demand. We might have bought a bottle of wine, or treated half a dozen boon companions, and thus helped win fathers and husbands from their love of home, but to us there would have been no pleasure in that, and not one bit of good accomplished.

And as we think of this little patient sufferer, of the thousands all over the land—we can not but feel thankful that we are not so poor, and that we have manhood enough to take care of our strength, and care for those we love. There are women all over our land—women who have homes, little ones they may be, but homes, and playful children, and loving husbands. Yet they are not contented, though a million times better off than many.—There are little children and big ones, dissatisfied with what they have, when they are queens compared to poor little Annie, who never utters a word of complaint.

And there are men who once loved, and caressed, and cared for their home ones—who even now are good and kind at heart—who do not know how their home ones love them, and pray for them, and long for their sober, loving, protecting presence—who are too good to throw themselves away, and leave those who love them to the chance care of those who may have hearts and love for all who suffer in mind or body.

And so, little ones, who read this true story of a little crippled girl—think if you are not better off than she. You have a home—loving father and mother—some one to love and to love you—a nice place to sleep, and no drunken father to rob you of your pennies, as little Annie's father robs her of the money she earns by sweeping the street on rainy days, that the rich who cross may not soil their silks or their boots. And when you see poor little children, use them well, and be kind to them. Then they will love you, and you all will be better.

And you, good woman, when tempted to scold and find fault with your lot, think if you are not better off than the woman of whom we write.

And you, our brothers—for we all are brothers, after all—look at your family and thank God that you have manhood, and the strength to care for your loved ones, as they will care for you when comes the time. And when you see a weak brother struggling to rise, help him. Stand by him. Encourage him. Give him employment, at least, kind words, and then we will all of us be better and happier when the work of the week—the battle of life be ended, and we can rest from labor, thanking God for such rest, and for the blessings which follow the good resolves of Saturday Night.—Brick Pomeroy.

Statistics of Human Life.

According to a French statistician, taking the mean of many accounts, a man fifty years of age has slept 6000 days, worked 6600 days, walked 800 days, amused himself 4000 days, was eating 1500 days, was sick 500 days, etc. He ate 17,000 pounds of bread, 16,000 pounds of meat, 4600 pounds of vegetables, eggs, and fish, and drank 7000 gallons of liquid; namely, water, coffee, tea, beer, wine, etc., all together. This would make a respectable lake of 300 square feet surface, and three feet deep, on which a small steamboat could navigate. And all this solid and liquid material passing through a human being in fifty years! Verily, there is after all some truth in the story of the ogre who drank a lake dry, to catch the fugitives that were sailing over it. Any man can do the same—only give him time.

This estimate is, however, made for a Frenchman; for an American we have to modify it, by lessening the number of days he devotes to amusements, and in place of this stipulate one thousand days for quietly speculating how to get more of the almighty dollar, fifteen hundred days for traveling by steam and horse power, and two hundred days in waiting for means of transportation. The latter number is by no means over-estimated for the inhabitants of New York, Philadelphia, or other large cities of the Union.

"Now Squirm, Old Natur."

A stingy Christian was listening to a charity sermon. He was nearly deaf and was accustomed to sit facing the congregation, right under the pulpit, with his ear-trumpet directed upward toward the preacher. The sermon moved him considerably. At one time he said: "I'll give ten dollars;" again he said: "I'll give fifteen!" At the close of the appeal he was very much moved, and thought he would give fifty dollars. As they moved along his charity began to ooze out—He came down from fifty to twenty, to ten, to five, to zero. He concluded that he would not give anything.—"Yet," he said, "this wont do—I am in a bad fix. My hopes of heaven may be in this question. This covetousness may be my ruin." The box was getting nearer and nearer. The crisis was upon him. What should he do? The box was now under his chin—all the congregation were looking. He had been holding his pocket-book in his hand during the colloquy, which was half audible, though in his deafness he did not know that he was heard. In the agony of the final moment, he took his pocket-book and laid it on the box, saying to himself as he did it; "Now squirm, old natur!"

PARENTS WITH ONLY ONE CHILD.—It is harder to bring up one child well than six. In a large family, the children help to bring one another up. It is not merely that the elder ones assist in taking care of the younger, but they all influence one another profitably in other ways; vanity is sometimes laughed into modesty, and arrogance is snubbed into humility. Each child is kept constantly in mind that others have feelings and preferences: as well as himself; he forms the habit of considering those rights, feelings and preferences; and he is thus prepared to "get along," as we say, with those among whom his lot may be cast. Parents with one child have a difficult task, and their best way is to get for their solitary chick as many playfellows, of its own age, as they conveniently can. It is bad for a child to associate too much with persons of mature age.

☞ "Where are you going to?" said one little boy to another, who had slipped and fallen down. "Going to get up," was the blunt reply.

Betsey's Night with the Bear.

What a dark wood, and what a brown little house right under the shadow of the tall Minnesota pines! Coming upon it, though, after long miles of silent forests, it seemed quite gay and lively, and if you went in, and saw the bright face mother and three children, and after a while the tall, sunburnt father, you made up your mind that this was almost a village. Then a few rods on, and the wood opened out of the clearing, where, day after day the father worked in his great field of corn and potatoes, which hardly needed scarecrows, because the blackened stumps, still standing, each seemed to be one. Then the lake, and the lake which emptied into it, and on the other side, the maple-wood, where sugar was made in Spring, when the Indians came down from the upper lakes.

In the Winter, the woods were filled with lumbermen, who camped only a mile or two from them, and through the Summer they amused themselves in a way you never would dream of. And so the years went on, and little Betty, the youngest, came to be four years old.

It was August a hot, bright day, the very height of the huckleberry season.

"Now children, I want you to do your prettiest to-day," Mrs. Brewer said early in the morning. "If you want your fill of huckleberry pie this Winter, you've got to get me a bushel more afore they're gone."

"I found a place yesterday," said Jack; "I bet there's half a bushel any how. Put Betty down in the middle, an' she might fill a two-quart pail without getting up."

"Well, bring home all you can," said the mother; and here's your dinners in this little pail. Look out for Betty."

"She'll look out for herself; she's cute as a fox this minute."

And Jack picked up his bucket and started on, followed by Sarah and Betty in Indian file.

Five or six miles to the best huckleberry field would seem a long way to you, but the children's brown bare feet never tired.

Before long they passed a little lake, stopped there to drink, and soon reached the opening where the berries grew thickest.

What with finding better and better places, and stopping sometimes to watch the scolding squirrels, and then to eat dinner, the day went swiftly by, and it was almost sunset when they turned home with heavy pails and baskets. Betty lagged behind, for she ached with long stooping, and Jack and Sarah grew more and more impatient.

"Now, Betty, we'll just leave you if you don't hurry. You've got the lightest pail. Come along quick!" said Jack.

"I can't. I won't go quick if I don't want to," and Betty half cried.

"Come along, Sal," cried Jack, hurrying on; and Betty, indignant, sat down on a log, and waited till they were almost out of sight.

"I know the way just as well as they do," she thought and walked on leisurely.

Jack turned once or twice, and seeing her following slowly, concluded she would overtake them, and went on.

Now and then, Betty stopped, the last time till they were entirely out of sight, determined to show she did not depend on them at all.

The shadows lengthened, the wood had never seemed so dark, and at last, a little frightened, Betty called loudly:

"Jack! O Jack!"

No answer save the echo, and now Betty ran on, hoping every moment to see the two before her. She did not notice that she had taken a trail leading off from the one they had gone over in the morning, and only stopped on coming to a swampy spot she did not remember. "O Jack!" she sobbed, turning once more, but now darkness was closing in upon her. The forest was thick and close, and try as she would there was no finding the other trail. Over head an owl hooted. She stumbled on, startled at the sudden sound, then tripped over a root, in the way, spilling the berries all about; picked herself up, only to fall again; caught at the air as she felt herself going; rolled down a steep decline, and lay at the bottom in a little heap.

It was nearly eight o'clock when Jack and Sarah walked into the little house and set their pails on the table.

"Where's Betty?" said the mother.

"Just behind; she wouldn't come along with us."

And Mrs. Brewer, satisfied, told them to sit down and eat their supper.

"Where's Betty?" said the father, presently coming in.

"She's coming; she wouldn't keep up with us," said Jack, privately a little uneasy in his mind at the long delay.

"Then go out now and help her along in," said Mr. Brewer. "It's a poor way for a boy to do, to leave a little gal alone in the woods, even if she does know the way."

Jack with a slice of bread in his hand, went out a little sulkily, and Mr. Brewer stood in the door looking down the trail. Half an hour went by.

"I don't see what's the matter," said Mrs. Brewer. I'm sort of worried, John. A'n't you a mind to go out?"

For answer, Mr. Brewer took down his gun and started. For an hour or more Mrs. Brewer waited, growing more and more anxious. Then she walked down the trail, calling now and then, coming suddenly at last upon her husband and Jack.

"Here's Jack, come home, wife. I'm said. "Take him [illegible] eauchamp. He's going for old Pierre [illegible] ook o' woods, knows every turn and [illegible] it's a raw night, and the child'll be [illegible] t fret," we bring her in; and do [illegible] own the and Mr. Brewer turned [illegible] old trail to Pierre's cabin.

I can hardly tell you how the night went by to the poor mother, waiting and watching, or to the father, who, with old Pierre, scoured every part of the woods on each side the trail, and by the light of their pine knot torches searched each hollow tree, thinking the child might possibly have crawled into one for shelter. They shouted and called; but morning dawned at last with no sign of Betty, and the father, exhausted and almost despairing, sank down under one of the tall pines, and hid his face in his hands. Suddenly he lifted his head.

"Datway," old Pierre said, as his quick ear caught a slight sound, and Mr. Brewer darted off to the left, but stopped short, and stood with such a ghastly face that old Pierre too paused a moment. Not a stone's throw from them flowed a wide, deep creek, one of the tributaries of Gull lake, and crossed her, by an old log thrown over it long ago by the Indians. A white birch grew by its side, and under it laid Betty, resting partly against a hugh brown bear, apparently asleep. At the slight crackling in the brush it raised its head, and growled low, put one paw on the child's dress, then as if scenting danger, turned, about, saw the two faces looking toward it, and with a fierce, loud growl, caught Betty in its mouth and darted toward the log.

"Vat you do? Vat you do?" said old Pierre as Mr. Brewer levled his gun. "You shoots now and mads the bear, den de chile all gone! wait a minute. Hold you still—not cry; keep you mooch quiet!" he called to Betty. "Not to be feared if you falls in de water."

As he spoke, the bear had reached the middle of the log, and turned now to see if he were followed. The small, fierce eyes rested a second on the pair, and in that second, old Pierre, the best shot in Minnesota, fired. Without struggle or sound, the bear reeled from the log to the dark water below, and once more Mr. Brewer leaped and dashed in and seized the screaming child.

"Do prettiest shot dis bon gun did ever fire," old Pierre shouted, hugging his gun and dancing wildly about, while Mr. Brewer hugged Pierre, the gun, and Betty all at once, and then ran toward home, forgetting all weariness in the great joy.

They were a happy family that day as sitting about the bed where Betty lay in state, they tried to make her tell when the bear came to her, and how she felt.

"I rolled way down somewhere," said Betty, "and sort of went to sleep, and then I cried when I woke up because I was all scratched an' smarty. Then I heard somefin comin' an' didn't cry any more, an' it came an' snuffed all round me. I thought maybe it would eat me up, but I couldn't cry, only I sort of whispered 'Now I lay me,' an' it key 'smellin' me.—It's tongue was all rough an' scratchy; it hurt me. But when I tried to get away it growled. Then I kept still, an' I didn't remember till it picked me up an' made me cry, coz the teeth pinched me, an' then I heard Pierre holler, and you got me out of the water."

Do you think this can't be true boys and girls? I know it is, for Betty herself told me the story. She is living still, and if you are anxious to find out her real name, write to me and I will tell you.—Hearth and Home.

THE WORKINGMAN'S CURSE.—The curse of the workingman is intemperance. Too many, who give muscle to their work, think that they get strong from wine, of beer, or whiskey, and too many, who give brain to their work, fall into the same sad error. In either case the stimulus brings a double hurt. It over-excites, and in consequence there is an exhaustion of muscle and brain; while it creates the desire, that, almost the necessity for more and increasing stimulation. To what fatal consequences all this leads we need scarcely say. It is the broad and easy way to drunkenness, poverty and ruin.

The royal road to prosperity, and happiness does not lie through the beer shop and drinking saloon. They who go in through these open doors, enter the way that leads to disease, poverty, wretchedness, and the destruction of all that makes life beautiful and desirable both here and hereafter.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—The affluence and comprehension of our language is very illustriously displayed in our poetical translations of ancient writers; a work which the French seem to relinquish in despair, and which we were long unable to perform with dexterity. From the time of Gower and Chaucer, the English writers have studied elegance, and advanced their language by successive improvements to as much harmony as it can easily receive, and as much copiousness as human knowledge has hitherto required, till every man now endeavors to excel others in accuracy or outshine them in splendor of style; and the danger is lest care should too soon pass to affectation.—JOHNSON.

"It appears from this petition, General," said Houston, "that you have been in the penitentiary eight years." "Yes, sir." "And you say that you have performed faithfully every duty imposed upon you during that time?" "Yes, sir." "Then, sir, I pardon you out."

☞ Robert forgets the "situation" when we "came in." We advocated the nomination of Gen. Grant while Republican "organs" everywhere were denouncing him as "fishey." CONGRESS.—The Republicans of this Congressional District are looking around for a good candidate to be voted for next fall. Cambria has declared for Mr. Morrell. Blair, Huntingdon and Mifflin will declare their preferences in June, July or August. We may have a preference until a majority of our County Convention names the man, after that our choice will be the nominee. Blair will most likely declare for Hon. Samuel Calvin. This county and Mifflin may present candidates.

☞ If we are to believe half we hear talked about, there must be a new political organization growing up in our midst and spreading into the townships. They say it is composed exclusively of the working masses of both the old parties, and the purpose seems to be to crush the office-seekers and party leaders, who have went back on their pledges to the masses. We regret that too many of the honest masses of the Republican party show a disposition to follow the example set them last fall by would-be Republican leaders. The masses can always command respect within the party organization if they will but show a determined will before nominations are made. We intend to respect an honest difference of opinion until nominations are made, after that we shall respect only (politically) the nominees of the Republican party.

Congress.

This Congressional District will be represented in Congress by somebody, but who that somebody will be is impossible now to tell. A portion of the Republican party are in favor of the nomination of Hon. D. J. Morrell; other portions are in favor of other Republicans. The Republicans of Cambria county have already held their Convention, after a warm contest at the delegate elections between the friends of Mr. Morrell and Mr. Barker. The Convention met at Ebensburg on Monday of last week, and gave the nomination of that county to Mr. Morrell for a third term—36 of the delegates dissenting and withdrawing and organizing a second Convention. The proceedings of the second or minority Convention we publish below that the Republicans of this county may see the "situation" in Cambria:

The undersigned, Delegates to the Republican nominating convention, being a minority of said body, and desiring that their subsequent action, disapproving of the manner in which the proceedings of that convention were conducted, shall be placed upon record, not only to justify themselves with honest members of our party whom an effort will be made to mislead, but also to most indignantly protest against the manner in which the dominant faction sought to muzzle a free interchange of the opinions and wishes of said delegates. The high handed outrage which was perpetrated upon the expressed wishes of said minority in refusing them a voice when the vital interests of our party are imperilled necessitated the calling of a second convention, immediately after the adjournment of the assembly brought from Johnstown with the plainly avowed purpose of forcing the present Congressional incumbent upon the people of this county, as the general choice, when it is only too apparent that the majority no longer desire to retain him in that position, in pursuance of the wishes of thirty-six delegates to said convention, C. T. Roberts, Esq., was chosen Chairman, E. Crum, P. M'Coy, and John Hawksworth, Vice Presidents, and Able Lloyd, Secretary.

The following protest, which had been handed to H. A. Boggs, Chairman of the convention, and first voted down, and although again requested to read the same refused to entertain the proposition, alleging that it was an anonymous production.—Thirty-six delegates immediately affixed their names to the subjoined.

PROTEST

The undersigned, Delegates to the Republican Convention this day assembled, respectfully but most earnestly protest against the action of said Convention in the admission of Delegates. Yielding to none in our devotion to those great principles under which the Republican party has achieved its past success, and on which it builds its future hopes, we cannot but perceive, in the course of the majority, a line of conduct which must distract our councils and hand us over a prey to our enemies. Built upon honest principles and following honest practices, we have been triumphant; but the system this day inaugurated belies our past history and must lead to disruption and defeat.

When we assert that corrupt means were employed in order to secure delegates, and that there are those sitting in this Convention who do not honestly represent the people, we state what is too painfully apparent to all, and we firmly believe that nominations so made cannot command the suffrages of those who prize honesty in politics. On the contrary, those who believe purity essential in nominations and elections, will spurn the candidates placed before the people corruptly as a nomination not fit to be made.

Our opponents, less honest in their own choice of candidates, would hail with joy a nomination which from its fraudulent surroundings, would give them an opening for success in a District which we have so long held from their grasp.

We therefore protest against a nomination procured in such a manner, as fraught with danger and defeat to a gallant and glorious party.

P. Baker, D. S. M'Anulty, S. J. Weakland, E. Crum, John Beers, F. M. Woleslagle, Samuel Read, P. F. Custer, E. Eastman.

At the conclusion of the reading of the protest Capt. Fox, of Washington township, was called upon to express the sentiments of this Convention. He stated that the nomination of D. J. Morrell, under the present existing feeling in this district, is calculated to disintegrate the Republican party, and insure the certain defeat of the candidate who had this day been forced upon the people, not by a fair and impartial expression of opinion, but by throwing out the honestly elected delegates of three districts opposed to his renomination, and procuring through fraud and corruption an additional number sufficient to give him a small plurality, and thus secure his name as the choice of the people of our county. At the conclusion of Capt. Fox's remarks, the following resolutions were offered and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the present existing feeling in the ranks of our party, instead of being allayed, will only be increased, and the nomination of Hon. D. J. Morrell will tend to widen the breach which the inexcusable conduct of his friends in Southern Cambria has been fomenting when it is so fully apparent that he is not the choice of the majority of the people of this county.

Resolved, That, confiding as we do in the integrity, statesmanship, and honesty of Hon. Samuel Calvin, of Blair county, that should he be recommended by the counties composing this Congressional District, we will give him our hearty support.

In taking the action which we have in this matter, we wish it to be distinctly understood that our unswerving and unflattering support will be given in the future, as in the past, to the principles of our glorious party, and that we cordially endorse the first three resolutions as passed by the regular Convention.

On motion of D. O. Evans adjourned, with three hearty cheers for Gen. Grant and the entire Republican Party.

ABEL LLOYD, Secretary.

☞ Away out in the Mediterranean, on one of the little fragments of the world that lie around Sardinia, there lives a man who takes kindly to kittens; to pets of all kinds, and to flowers. I shouldn't wonder if he loved potatoe blossoms even; but I'm sure about cats, for he has one which is his faithful follower, his warm and purring friend. Where he goes there pussy goes. All things are forgiven her, all liberties accorded; and so, in spite of dogs and men, she has taken to hunting; lifts her ears fiercely to the sound of the bugle, ranges herself with the hounds, and leads the pack, which sometimes to its chagrin, arrives in time to see puss with a flying leap pounce upon the bird and hold hard till her master appears. ☞ From a mere political weapon, and therefore a luxury, the newspaper has come to be an every-day commodity. Its business must be conducted on the same principles which apply to dry goods, groceries and cutlery. Its attaches are, or ought to be, business men. It is a public conveyance, a vehicle of thought and general intelligence. It has no more claim to consideration outside of its intrinsic value than a sack of coffee; and though persons who call themselves "members of the press" frequently urge their demands by reason of some mysterious attribute that has no real existence, the plain matter-of-fact commercial standard which applies to trade at large still remains in force and applies to the profession of journalism. You subscribe for a paper as you order a certain brand of flour, because you like it. It suits you. You advertise in a newspaper, not because you like the individuals connected with it, but because it answers the purpose of popular communication which you wish to establish. No paper has a right to become a stipendiary on the friends of its owners or editors. A paper which is not its own support is not worth supporting. A marketable article will always sell readily, and a marketable newspaper is no exception to the rule.—Ex.

PUGILISTIC.—We had thought the day of prize-fighting in America had passed, but we were pained to see that another of these brutal exhibitions took place last week near New Orleans between Jem Mace and Tom Allen.—Jem won at the end of ten rounds, which lasted forty-five minutes. We think the sensibilities of our good people would be extremely shocked were they obliged to witness such an exhibition as this in their midst, but it is not surprising to us that at a prize-fight in a city all the roughs congregate to bet on their favorites, and if anybody has too much money about him, he sometimes goes away with less, having been relieved of the same by some expert pickpocket. "Birds of a feather will flock together," and if their judgment can't teach them anything, then let their experience make them feel. We suppose Jem Mace wont hold his honors long, as every bull-dog prize-fighter in the country will challenge him, and teach him that uneasy, indeed, lies the crown on such a victor's head.

SHOCKING CALAMITY.

A heart rending affair occurred one mile north of Oakville Station, opposite Catskill, on the Hudson, at eight o'clock Sunday morning, which resulted in the drowning of the well-known doorkeeper of the Assembly in 1869, Mr. R. A. Decker, and his two sons. It appears that the youngest son, Jas. awakening in the morning before the other members of the family went down to the beach in front of the house and got in a small boat to play. Accidentally stumbling he fell out of the boat into the river.

His frantic cries for help were heard by Mr. Decker, his father, who was still in bed, and who rushed from the house to save his son. He entered the water and waded towards the little fellow, but when he reached him both were so exhausted that they at once disappeared to rise no more. The noise, it seems, also attracted the attention of Deibert Decker, another and older son, eighteen years of age, who was also in bed. He, too, hurried out and waded in, but sad to relate, seemed to become at once exhausted and sunk. The bodies of all three were soon after recovered. The affair cast a gloom over all classes in the vicinity. The mother and another son are left to mourn their triple loss.

Death in the Clouds.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 4.—Yesterday evening the following note was dropped from a balloon high in the air moving in a southeasterly direction, near Montpelier, Blackford county, this State. It was fastened to a loose piece of wood and iron weighing about one and a half pounds:

"Sailed from Toronto, April 28, for New York: met with adverse winds, and by a sudden movement of the balloon, Mr. Lagrange was thrown out, I suppose as near as I could determine, over the southern part of Michigan.—Not knowing how to manage the ship it has been tossed to and fro in all directions since he fell out. I am alone, and no earthly power can save me. I drop these lines hoping some human will find them and communicate to my parents the tidings of my melancholy fate. To heaven I commit my soul. Please send them this note. Ralph Lawrence, Upper Canada.

☞ Among the incidents of the Richmond disaster are many of an exceedingly remarkable character. A Norfolk lady and gentleman, Miss Frothingham and her father, of Brooklyn New York, who were viewing the surrounding country from the cupola of the building at the time of the sad event, were entirely cut off for nearly two hours, and were kept in terror in their lofty prison, from which they could witness the movements of the excited crowd below, the display of dead and dying on the square, the endless scene of confusion, with the tolling of bells, wailing of women and children, without the remotest idea of the of it all. In this predicament they remained, all escape being cut off by the falling of the staircase by which they had ascended, until by breaking through a skylight they succeeded in reaching the open air, where they beheld in all its horrors the disaster that nearly included them among its victims.

A Kansas city baker, with horse and wagon, was thrown over the bluffs of that city recently, a distance of 100 feet. The horse was instantly killed, the wagon wrecked, but the baker escaped without a hurt.

M'Farland Acquitted.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The jury in the M'Farland case returned a verdict of not guilty, which was greeted with much enthusiasm, and M'Farland was discharged from custody. Immediately after Recorder Hackett had finished his charge, the jury, accompanied by Captain M'Closkey, of the court squad, proceeded to the jury room and were locked in by the captain. The court room presented an almost indescribable scene while the jury was out. Everybody was talking excitedly to his neighbor, and the ladies were influenced by the utmost agitation. An occasional stir in the court room near the door drew immediate attention thereto, and the people started up only to settle back again and wait. When the jury did return, and marched slowly into the room and to their seats, the most breathless excitement prevailed, and the long-drawn respiration of the auditors could be easily heard. Every eye was fastened upon the jurors and M'Farland himself gazed upon them intently as if trying to fathom the calmness of their visages and learn his fate. The jury took their seats and the clerk called the name of each member, and the foreman was called upon for a verdict. He rose, and here came a moment of intense anxiety. In reply the foreman said: "We find Daniel M'Farland not guilty." The jury was then polled. The scene which followed baffles description. The enthusiasm reached such a height that it was impossible to suppress the noise, and the pent up emotions of six long weeks were given vent in a most demonstrative manner. M'Farland was surrounded by a number of friends and hands shaking, warm and earnest, was divided between him and the counsel for the defense. M'Farland was discharged from custody by Recorder Hackett, and passed out of the court room into the streets a free man, followed by the most of the people.

A Destructive Hail Storm at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—This afternoon the most destructive hail storm ever known here passed over the city from northwest to southeast. For nearly thirty minutes there was a continuous fall of hailstones, from the size of a pea to six or seven inches in circumference. The damage done greatly exceeds that of the storm of September, 1868. The greatest force of the storm was along Broad street, in the southern section of the city. On the south side of Chesnut street, above Eighth, hardly a pane of glass is left. On Broad street many churches had stained glass windows destroyed. The windows in front of the Continental Hotel were destroyed. Reports from the outskirts state the almost total destruction of fruit trees, which were just in bloom. At nine o'clock tonight the hail still remained in piles in the streets.

The storm did not extend across the Delaware river to Camden, and dispatches from the interior say there was no hail there. Many of the hotels were greatly damaged, especially the Bingham House, corner of Eleventh and Market streets. The windows were shattered in the whole front of the building.

A funeral procession proceeding from a house in Seventeenth street, below Pine, was caught in the storm. The horses attached to the hearse became unmanageable and ran away. The horses of several of the carriages followed, and the vehicles coming in collision the wheels of the hearse were broken off, and the hearse, with the corpse of a child in it, overturned.

Brutality Unparalleled.

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS, May 13.—An account of the most diabolical affair ever recorded is published in to day's Monitor. On Tuesday six men, either Texans or straggling out laws from Indian Territory, came to the town of Ladore, a few miles south of this place. After drinking all day they went to the boarding house of N. J. Roach and asked to stay all night. Being refused on account of their drunken condition, one of the party knocked Roach insensible with a revolver, and then they went to the bed occupied by two daughters of Roach, aged twelve and fourteen, and ravished them during the entire night, using a knife to accomplish their purpose. Roach revived after a time, but he feared to stir, knowing he would be killed if he did so. He describes the cries and entreaties of the girls as heartrending.—A quarrel arose among the demons, and one was shot dead while in the act of satisfying his lust. At daybreak the party fled, one taking with him to the woods the youngest girl. The town was immediately aroused, and parties started in every direction in search of the fiends. The one with the girl was soon overtaken and hung to a tree.—Two others were found secreted in the town and hung to the same tree. The remaining three were also captured, and two of them hung. The other one, at last accounts, was in the custody of the citizens, but will probably share the fate of his companions. The universal verdict here is that in this instance at least, the summary manner of the infliction of punishment is entirely justifiable.

ADDRESS

TO THE

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED,

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED FROM HIDDEN CAUSES, AND WHOSE CASES REQUIRE

PROMPT TREATMENT,

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE

If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urine organs, or your kidneys, get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or ropey, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and dagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you rest less nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become and and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. Those will not only ruin their constitution, but those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly cured diseases, from the effects of self abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in these organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—piles, tumors, ulcers, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every form of disease humanity is heir to—and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

DISEASES OF THESE ORGANS REQUIRE THE USE OF A

DIURETIC.

LECTURES ON INDIA.—Rev. John D. Brown, nine years a Missionary in India, having just returned to his native land, will deliver two lectures for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A, in the Court House on Friday and Saturday evenings, May 20th and 21st, on the Manners and Customs of the Natives of that heathen land. The first of these lectures will be descriptive of pilgrimages to, and grand Melas on the Ganges and other sacred shrines of India, female degradation and suicide, curses of child marriage and polygamy, child murder, burning the dead, bloody sacrifices by northern tribes, leper asylums, Mahommedan bigotry, curse of caste, reptiles, modes of travel, missionary work, etc., etc. These lectures will be full of strange and striking interest, and as the house will be full, tickets should be secured early. Tickets sold at Blair's, Read's and Glazier's stores.

A Boston writer comes to the defense of women against the current notion that they are peculiarly addicted to gossip, alleging that in a country grocery store, among barrels of molasses, and piles of salt fish, more gossip is talked by men in one evening than is heard in all the farm-houses of the town. We are strongly inclined to agree with the Boston man.

ROSADALIS

THIS Great American Health Restorer, purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and thousand of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of Physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis; is as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken three bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of all alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of scrofula and secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFaddin, Murfreesboro', Tennessee, says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and accurately cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for years with an internal swelling; ution over my body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by John Read and S. S. Smith, Huntingdon, Pa., and Druggists generally.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

XV.

PLOWING—GOOD AND BAD.

There are so many wrong ways to do a thing to but one right one that there is no reason in the impatience too often evinced with those who contrive to swallow the truth wrong and foremost, and thereupon insist that it won't do. For instance: A farmer hears something said of deep plowing, and, without any clear understanding of or firm faith in it, resolves to give it a trial. So he buys a great plow, makes up a strong team, and proceeds to turn up a field hitherto plowed out six inches, to the depth of at least ten inches—in other words, to bury its soil under six inches of cold sterile clay, sand, or gravel.—On this he plants or sows grain and is lucky indeed if he realizes half a crop. Hereupon, he reports to his neighbors that Deep Plowing is a humbug, as he suspected all along; but now he knows for he has tried it. There are several other wrong ways which I will hurry over in order to set forth that which I regard as the right one.

Here is a middling farmer of the old school, who walks carefully in the footsteps of his respected grandfather, but with inferior success, because sixty annual harvests, though not particularly luxuriant, have partially exhausted the productive capacity of the acres he inherited. He now garners from fifteen to thirty bushels of Corn, from ten to twenty of Wheat, from fifteen to twenty of Rye, from twenty to thirty of Oats, and from a tun to a tun and a half of Hay, as the season proves more or less propitious, and just contrives to draw from his sixty to one hundred acres a decent subsistence for his family; plowing, as his father and grandfather did, to a depth of five to seven inches: What can Deep Plowing do for him?

I answer—By itself, nothing whatever. If in every other respect, he is to persist in doing just as his father and his grandfather did, I doubt the expediency of doubling the depth of his furrows. True, the worst effects of the change would be realized at the outset, and I feel confident that his six inches of subsoil, having been made to change places with that which formerly rested upon it, must gradually be wrought upon by air and rain and frost, until converted into a tolerably productive soil, through which the roots of most plants would easily and speedily make their way down to the richer stratum which, originally surface, has been transposed into subsoil. But this exchange of positions between the original surface and subsoil is not what I mean by Deep Plowing, nor anything like it. What I do mean is this:

Having thoroughly underdrained a field, so that water will not stand upon any part of its surface, no matter how much may there be deposited, the next step in order is to increase the depth of the soil. To this end, procure a regular sub-soil plow of the most approved pattern, attach to it a strong team, and let it follow the breaking plow in its furrow, lifting and pulverizing the subsoil to a depth of not less than six inches, but leaving it in position exactly where it was. The surface plow turns the next furrow upon this loosened subsoil, and so on till the whole field is thus pulverized to a depth of not less than twelve inches, or, better still, fifteen. Now, please remember that you have twice as much soil per acre to fertilize as there was before; hence, that it consequently requires twice as much manure, and you will have laid a good foundation for increased crops. I do not say that all the additional outlay will be returned to you in the increase of your next crop, for I do not believe any thing of the sort; but I believe that this crop will be considerably larger for this generous treatment, especially if the season prove remarkably dry or uncommonly wet; and that you will have insured better crops in the years to come, including heavier grass, after that field shall once more be laid down; and that, in case of the planting of that field to fruit or other trees, they will grow faster, resist disease better, and thrive longer, than if the soil were still plowed as of old. (I shall insist hereafter on the advantage and importance of sub soiling orchards.)

Take another aspect—that of subsoiling hill-sides to prevent their abrasion by water.

I have two bits of warm, gravelly hill-side, which bountifully yield Corn, Wheat and Oats, but which are addicted to washing. I presume one of these bits, at the south-east corner of my farm, has been plowed and planted not less than one hundred times, and that at least half the fertilizers applied to it have been washed into the brook, and hence into the Hudson. To say that $1,000 have thus been squandered on that patch of ground, would be to keep far within the truth. And, along with the fertilizers, a large portion of the finer and better elements of the original soil have thus been swept into the brook, and so lavished upon the waters of our bay. But, since I had those lots thoroughly subsoiled, all water that falls upon them when in tillage sinks into the soil, and remains there until drained away by filtration or evaporation; and I never saw a particle of soil washed from either save once, when a thaw of one or two inches on the surface, leaving the ground solidly frozen beneath, being quickly followed by a pouring rain, washed away a few bushels of the loosened and sodded surface, proving that the law by virtue of which these fields were formerly denuded while in cultivation is still active, and that Deep Plowing is an effective and all but unfailing antidote for the evils it tends to incite.

We plow too many acres annually, and do not plow them so thoroughly as we ought. In the good time coming, when Steam shall have been so harnessed to a gang of six to twelve plows that, with one man guiding and firing, it will move as fast as a man ought to walk, steaming on and thoroughly pulverizing from twelve to twenty-five acres per day, I believe we shall plow at least two feet deep, and plow not less than twice before putting in any crop whatever. Then we may lay down a field in the confident trust that it will yield from two and a half to three tuns of good hay per annum for the next ten or twelve years; while, by the help of irrigation and occasional top-dressing, it may be made to average at least three tuns for a lifetime, if not forever.

☞ To the parent whose son dies in infancy," says the Louisville Courier Journal, "there must be something peculiarly soothing in the thought that, no matter what may be the fate of the child in the next world, it can never become a member of a base ball club in this."

☞ To make little boys' trousers last when you make a suit of clothes for them finish the coat first, and, by so doing, you will make the trousers last. Isn't it queer some people can see farther into a mill-stone than others?

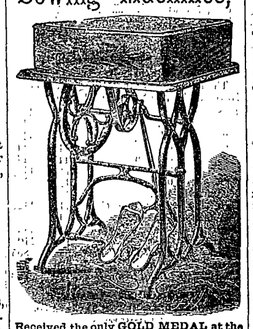
WHEELER & WILSON'S
HIGHEST PREMIUM
LOCK STITCH
Sewing Machines,



Received the only GOLD MEDAL at the PARIS EXPOSITION, 1867.

They are adapted to all kinds of Family Sewing, and to the use of Seamstresses, Dressmakers, Tailors, Manufacturers of Shirts, Collars, Skirts, Cloaks, Trousers, Clothing, Hats, Caps, Corsets, Linen Goods, Umbrellas, Parasols, etc. They work equally well upon silk, linen, woolen and cotton goods, with silk, cotton or linen thread. They will seam, quilt, gather, hem, fell, cord, braid, bind, and perform every species of sewing, making a beautiful and perfect stitch, alike on both sides of the article sewed.

The qualities which recommend them are:
1. Beauty and excellence of stitch, alike on both sides of the fabric sewed.
2. Strength, firmness and durability of seam, that will not rip nor ravel.
3. Economy of Thread.
4. Attachments and wide range of application to purposes and materials.
5. Compactness and elegance of model and finish.
6. Simplicity and thoroughness of construction.
7. Speed, ease of operation and management, and quietness of movement.

Instruction free to all. Machines kept in repair one year free of charge.

McGUIRE'S

SPANISH HAIR DRESSER

FOR PROMOTING THE GROWTH, BEAUTIFYING THE HAIR,

And rendering it dark and glossy. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair. The use of this oil as a hair dresser has been universal in every section of the country in the Spanish Main for centuries.—Its preparation of art could give that elegant luxuriance and abundance of hair which have so often been the admiration of travelers in Spain. This oil is highly and delicately perfumed, forming an article unrivaled in excellence and upon which the Spanish people for many years have set its seal of enduring approval.

McGUIRE'S

Mexican Wild Flowers Shampoo Lotion

For removing dandruff and scurf from the head, whitening and performing the skin. This article is entirely different from anything of the kind ever offered in this country and is warranted free from all poisonous substances. This valuable lotion was used by the late Emperor Maximilian, and Empress Carlotta of Mexico, and universally by the Mexicans for three hundred years. As a wash for the head—it is cooling, cleansing and refreshing.—When thus used it at once relieves headache.

McGUIRE'S

WILD FLOWERS FOR THE TEETH.

All those who are in favor of white teeth and a pleasant and perfumed breath, should at once use McGuire's Wild Flowers for the Teeth. All these preparations are put up in the most elegant and ornamental manner. We make no exception in saying that they are an ornament to a lady's toilet table, and none complete without them.

Warranted satisfactory or money refunded. Dealers will bear this in mind. Sold by all respectable Druggists in the United States and Canada. Address orders to

GET THE BEST

READY ROOFING

Suitable for all Buildings, Dwellings, Barns, Churches Factories, &c., and for all climates; equally adapted to flat or steep roofs, and can be applied by any ordinary workman.

THE READY ROOFING

Is more durable than tin, and does not cost one-half as much. It is cheaper than shingles, far more durable, and fire-proof. It is made of the heaviest fabric ever used for the purpose, and is put up in rolls ready for shipment to any part of the world. Send for circular and samples (sent free.)

We also manufacture

GRANITE CEMENT,

For repairing all kinds of leaky roofs, chimneys, sky lights, &c. This Roofing Cement forms a permanent adhesive coating over the whole surface of all roofs, whether tin, shingle or composition, completely closing up leakages, and being composed largely of ground granite, which sets and hardens, and soon becomes an artificial Slate or Stone covering.

ROOF PAINT,

For coating Tin and all kinds of metal and composition roofs. It will not run, crack, or peal off, but form a permanent and perfect protection, wherever placed. It is furnished at half the cost, and possesses twice the durability of the common oil paints used for such purposes.

SOLDIERS' HEIRS, ATTENTION!

The act of Congress approved March 2, 1867, gives to Heirs of Soldiers who died prisoners of war, for the time the soldier was so held a prisoner, at the rate of twenty-five cents per day, to be paid in the following order: 1st. To the widow, if unmarried; 2d. To the children; 3d. To the parents, to both jointly if they are living, if either is dead, to the survivor; 4th. To the brothers and sisters.

COMMUTATION FOR RATIONS,

The act of February 28, 1867, provides for the refunding of the $300 Commutation Money, where the same person was again drafted, and was required to enter the service or furnish a substitute.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

The act of March 2, 1867, also makes provisions for the payment of the

to such soldiers as have accidentally lost their discharges.

All persons having any claims under any of the above mentioned Acts, or any other kind of claim against the United States or State Governments, can have them promptly collected, by addressing the undersigned. Information and advice cheerfully given, to soldiers or their friends, free of charge.
